Sticks and Stones

Rhode Island’s rugged northwest corner encompasses expansive woodlands, historic farms, and villages that buzz with community life. This year’s statewide historic preservation conference will explore historic rural landscapes and the long-term impact of changes on the land. The sticks are the forests, cleared for agricultural fields long ago, regrown, and now managed as conservation land, park, and private woodlot. The stones remain where they were placed to mark burials, to provide sturdy building foundations, and to build walls that separated farm fields and delineated property boundaries.

Conference sessions consider the legacy of our public woodlands and demonstrate how LiDAR technology can penetrate forest cover to find evidence of historic landscapes and archaeological sites. Additional workshops take on a range of topics like preservation grants and tax credits, local planning initiatives, Rhode Island’s Art Deco architecture, and a new statewide initiative to create heritage tourism apps for your mobile phone. The Rhody Film Showcase features shorts and clips from historical documentaries about stone carvers and stone masons, Harrisville and Slatersville, elephants and diners.

The tours highlight town and country. Stroll through Chepachet once, twice, three times, or more to learn about local history, architecture, industry, and planning. Explore the historic villages of Foster Center, North Scituate, and Harrisville. Visit historic farms where apple trees and a variety of market vegetables grow, and the livestock includes sheep, pigs, chickens, and beef cattle. Take a hike through a nearby forest to discover evidence of historic settlements, farming, and logging. Or join a house tour of mid-century modern residences that marry popular modular designs with local materials and craftsmanship. Discover Rhode Island’s own northwest territory, stick by stick and stone by stone.

The Opening Session is hosted by St. Eugene’s Parish. Catholics first gathered to worship in Gloucester at the Chepachet Inn in 1905. Subsequent meeting places included the A.O.U.W. Hall (Ancient Order of United Workmen) and the basement of the town building. On September 11, 1956, Bishop Russell J. McVinney established St. Eugene’s Parish.

The parish’s new church was dedicated on December 22, 1957. Described in The Providence Visitor as “a blending of gothic with...early colonial design,” the church has a pedimented portico that supports a modern copper-covered steeple that rises through the gable roof. The interior features a series of stained glass windows created by F & P Chigot of Limoges, France and relief sculptures that depict the Stations of the Cross. Metal and glass lanterns hang from the beamed ceiling.

The church hosts several special events during the year, including an Annual Yard Sale, Car Show, and Italian Night. As the parish describes itself, “The story of St. Eugene’s Parish has been one of steady, slow and unspectacular progress built on a good foundation of hardy, self-reliant people who fit in well with the rugged and rocky terrain of the parish.”

Official Greetings

Following a demonstration by the Gloucester Light Infantry, the conference gets underway with remarks from Father T.J. Varghese, Governor Gina M. Raimondo, Gloucester Town Council President Walter M.O. Steere III, Maia Farish of Roger Williams University, and RIHPHC Executive Director Ted Sanderson.

Special Presentation and Remarks

The Blackstone River Valley National Heritage Corridor, Inc. will present the John H. Chafee Heritage Award to Senator Jack Reed in recognition of his leadership in creating a new national park in the Blackstone River Valley, expanding the National Heritage Corridor, and extending its authorization.

From Sticks to Stones and Back Again:
The Underground Story of New England’s Stone Walls

Robert M. Thorson, Ph.D.
Professor of Geology, University of Connecticut

Almost everyone knows the familiar story of New England’s stone walls. The one about colonial settlement, the conversion of forest to farm, and the building of fences when the wood supply ran short. In this romanticized version, the yeoman farmer became a mythic hero, an “eastern cowboy” to maintain regional pride in a nation now looking westward.

The actual story is far more interesting. Clearing the “sticks” of the forest caused changes in the soil, which led inevitably to a litter of “stones” in the field. Managing this chronic problem led—stone by stone—to the dense latticework of walls we find on the landscape today. Lurking beneath the need to mark property boundaries and to fence fields lay the most important reason to build stone walls: having a place to put the stones. Today, walls ornament our rural architecture, enhance cultural tourism, and remind us of our agro-ecological past. Protecting them must be a top priority—especially in Rhode Island which historically had the highest concentration of stone walls in the United States.

Robert Thorson was a field geologist before joining the faculty of the University of Connecticut in 1984. His scientific career took an unexpected turn after publication of Stone by Stone: The Magnificent History in New England’s Stone Walls in 2002. Following the launch of the Stone Wall Initiative, he became an ardent advocate for the preservation of historic stone walls, a popular speaker, a freelance essayist, and an opinion journalist for the Hartford Courant. Thorson’s other books include Stone Wall Secrets (1998), Exploring Stone Walls (2005), Beyond Walden (2009), and Walden’s Shore (2014). Signed books will be available for sale at the conference.

The Keynote Address is sponsored by Roger Williams University.

A1 LiDAR – A New Tool for Historic Preservation

Timothy Ives, Archaeologist, RIHPHC
 Katharine Johnson, Doctoral Candidate in Geology, University of Connecticut
 Jane Miller, GIS Specialist, PAL
 Robert M. Thorson, Professor of Geology, University of Connecticut
 Joseph Waller, Senior Archaeologist, PAL

This session showcases a range of applications for LiDAR (Light Detection and Ranging) in historic preservation. This publicly available, remote sensing technology can penetrate forest cover, allowing researchers to discern the locations and arrangements of long-forgotten farmsteads and mill complexes. It is also useful for evaluating the integrity of historic landscapes and for assessing damage to archaeological sites along Rhode Island’s eroding coastline.

A2 It’s in the Details: Energy Efficiency in Historic Buildings

Eric Army, AIA, Principal, Studio MEJA Architects
 Kenneth J. Eldridge, Jr., PE, Principal, Innovative Construction & Design Solutions
 Virginia Hesse, Architect, RIHPHC

Architectural and engineering professionals share their perspectives on achieving high-performance, energy-efficient buildings in historic preservation and adaptive re-use projects without sacrificing historic character. Speakers will provide in-depth analysis of a few key details, such as high-performance mechanical systems, insulation, and window/wall relationships.

A3 Arts and Preservation Grants: Ready, Set, Apply!

Morgan Devlin, RIHPHC Commissioner and Communications Manager, Preserve Rhode Island
 Randy Rosenbaum, Executive Director, R.I. State Council on the Arts
 Sarah Zurier, Special Projects Coordinator, RIHPHC

Last November, Rhode Islanders voted to fund the Creative and Cultural Economy Bonds, providing $5 million for the State Preservation Grants (SPG) and nearly $6.9 million for the State Cultural Facilities Grants (SCFG). Both of these competitive grant programs fund capital projects at arts, culture, and public historic sites around the state, but which program is right for your organization? Ask for input on your potential project.

A4 Rhode Tour: Let Your Fingers Do the Walking

C. Morgan Grefe, Executive Director, R.I. Historical Society
 SueEllen Kroll, Director of Grants & Strategic Partnerships, R.I. Council for the Humanities
 Ronald Potvin, Assistant Director for Professional Programs, John Nicholas Brown Center for Public Humanities and Cultural Heritage

Rhode Tour is a statewide mobile historical smartphone application that allows its “tour guides” to use stories, sounds, historic images, photographs, and video to bring Rhode Island histories alive. Rhode Tour offers historians, curators, researchers, and enthusiasts a new way to showcase and interact with both recognized and untold people, places, things, and events.

A5 Chepachet Village History and Architecture WALKING TOUR

Kevin Klyberg, Ranger, Blackstone River Valley National Historical Park
 Marie Sweet and Mark Rechter, Volunteers, Gloucester Heritage Society

Located at a river crossing, Chepachet has been a key center for manufacturing, commerce, and civic life for more than three centuries. This tour will cover the history and architecture of Chepachet Village with stops that include the Job Armstrong Store (1814), Masonic Hall (1803), Lawton Owen’s Mill (1814), Cooke’s Tavern (c. 1800), Brown & Hopkins Store (1799), workers’ housing, and former mill sites along the river.

11:15am – 1:15pm

A6 Gateway to Chepachet: Pettingell-Mason House TOUR with LUNCH*

Edna Kent, Gloucester Town Historian
 Robert Leach, NCARB, Architect
 Roberta Randall, Architect, RIHPHC
 Charlotte Taylor, Archaeologist, RIHPHC
 John Vaughan, Principal, Architectural Conservation Services

The house that stands at the foot of Acote’s Hill is a witness to history. Built in 1747 as the centerpiece of a homestead farm, the house was sold to a physician who practiced here during the Revolutionary War, and it served as a field hospital for the state militia during the Dorr Rebellion of 1842. Learn how ongoing archaeological, architectural, and historical investigation is driving the careful restoration, inside and out.

*Tour A6 is 2 hours long and includes a group lunch.

A7 One Powerful Place: Steere Farm TOUR with LUNCH*

11:15am – 1:15pm

Clifford Brown, Professor, Union College and Chepachet Free Will Baptist Church Historian
 Ned Connors, Preservation Consultant

This tour visits a family farm, where generations have worked the land to extract its resources. Around 1810, the Steeres erected a sawmill to process logs and expanded it in 1863. During the Civil War, they manufactured shoddy (recycled wool cloth). In the early 20th century, they installed a generator to produce electricity and powered 120 customers from Chepachet to Mapleville. Having recently restored the sawmill, the Steeres now put their energy into harvesting solar power, raising beef, and growing hay.

A8 Scituate Past, Planned, and Preserved TOUR with LUNCH*

11:15am – 1:15pm

David Ellingwood, President, Hope Historical Society
 Fred T. Faria, Past President, Scituate Preservation Society
 Raymond Wolf, Author

Visit significant sites like the Indian Council Bowl, Indian Rock, and the North Scituate Historic District. Discover the history of the radio monitoring system that intercepted enemy signals during World War II and made Scituate a leading candidate for the location of the United Nations Headquarters. And remember the thousands of buildings, farms, and roads lost and lives changed when the Scituate Reservoir was established. The tour includes a stop at the Scituate Town Hall to eat lunch, view artifacts, and learn about the building of the reservoir.

A9 Once, Twice, Three Times a Village: Harrisville TOUR with LUNCH*

11:15am – 1:15pm

Jeffrey Emidy, Project Review Coordinator, RIHPHC
 Tom Kravitz, Director of Economic Development, Town of Burrillville
 Betty Mencucci, President, Burrillville Historical & Preservation Society

Harrisville was a typical mill village until 1912, when the Stillwater Worsted Company took over operations of the existing mills. With the advice of his wife June Rockwell Levy, owner Austin T. Levy remade Harrisville as a utopian “New Village.” The factories, housing, and civic buildings erected by Levy remain in use today. Amble through the community transformed by Levy’s vision and learn how 21st-century planning preserves and enhances this unique town center.

*Tours A7–9 are 2 hours long and include a group lunch.

B1 Preserving Small Town Character Amidst Change

John Flaherty, Former Town Council President, Town of North Smithfield
 Timothy Inacio, Planner, Town of Glocester
 Christine McIntyre-Hannon, Artist/Owner, Hannon Art Works
 Samuel Shamoon, AICP, Shamoon Planning LLC

Learn how northern Rhode Island villages manage to preserve small-town character while creating opportunities for growth. Topics include infrastructure improvements, historic district and village zoning, incentives for new businesses, and the role of artists and artisans in building community.

B2 Chepachet Meeting House Talk and Tour

Clifford Brown, Professor, Union College and Chepachet Free Will Baptist Church Historian

Erected by builder Clark Sayles in 1821, the Chepachet Meeting House is one of the few intact Federal-style meeting houses remaining in Rhode Island. The design is attributed to Elias Carter (1781-1864), a self-taught architect who began his career as a carpenter. This illustrated talk will discuss the origins of New England Federal-style church architecture and locate the Chepachet Meeting House within that tradition. The talk will be followed by a tour that discusses preservation projects, including the rebuilding of the steeple in 1978 and the interior restoration that took place in 2002-05.

B3 A Classroom the Size of Rhode Island: Recent University Projects

Students and faculty from Brown University, Rhode Island College, RISD, Roger Williams University, and Salve Regina University

Undergraduate and graduate students are participating in exciting research, interpretation, and design projects that are expanding the field of historic preservation in Rhode Island—particularly in Newport. This year’s topics include new architectural concepts for Fort Adams, a plan to address floodwater inundation in Newport’s historic Point neighborhood, and documentation of St. John the Evangelist Church.

B4 Rhody Film Showcase: Part I

Paulette Hamilton, Town Administrator, Town of North Smithfield
 Bonnie MacDonald, Professor of Communications and Film Studies, Rhode Island College
 Frank Muhly, Jr., Filmmaker
 Ken Proudfoot, Filmmaker

Watch clips and film shorts and then join filmmakers in conversation about capturing history on film, from northern Rhode Island mill villages to Newport stone carvers. The first of two consecutive sessions of the Rhody Film Showcase features “The Amazing Life & Times of Austin T. Levy” by Ken Proudfoot, “Slatersville: America’s First Mill Village” by Christian de Rezendes, and “Final Marks: The Art of the Carved Letter” by Frank Muhly Jr. and Peter O’Neill. See also CA.

B5 Chepachet River Industry WALKING TOUR

Ned Connors, Preservation Consultant
 Charlotte Taylor, Archaeologist, RIHPHC

The falling waters of Chepachet, where the river crossed the 19th-century turnpike from Providence to Hartford, made this an ideal spot for setting up small country mills to serve the local agricultural economy. Over time the mills grew, and soon the river banks were a hub of industry. Join us for a walk along the south bank of the Chepachet River in the heart of the village to visit the visible and not-so-visible remains of 150 years of industrial activity and learn about the rise and ultimate decline of Chepachet’s industrial pursuits.

B6 Applying LiDAR to Historic Landscape Analysis: Sprague Farm HIKE*

2:00pm–5:00pm

Timothy Ives, Archaeologist, RIHPHC
 Betty Mencucci, President, Burrillville Historical & Preservation Society

Travel by bus to the Gloucester Land Trust’s Sprague Farm property to hike across a series of historic farmsteads that have been long obscured by reforestation. LiDAR maps will be supplied, allowing you to visualize the countryside without modern tree cover. During the hike, you will become familiar with the LiDAR signatures of various farmstead features as you ground truth them. This experience will provide a useful foundation for using LiDAR to investigate historic landscapes in Rhode Island’s many forested places.

*Tour B6 is 3 hours long. If you go on this tour, you will not be able to attend a C session.

B7 Modern Living in the Woods HOUSE TOUR*

2:00pm–5:00pm

Kevin Bruneau, President, Bruneau Antiques, Inc.
 Robert Stack, Creator, Mid-Century Modern Rhode Island
 Molly Tee, Project Director, Acorn Deck House Company
 Richard Ventrone, Jr., AIA, Principal, Ventrone Architecture LLC
 Catherine Zipf, Research Scholar, MIT

Nestled in the woods of Gloucester and Scituate are exceptional examples of prefabricated modern houses whose preservation-minded owners have undertaken sensitive alterations without diminishing original character. This tour will visit two homes built from ca. 1960 plans from Deck House Inc.: the Dag and Uni Johannessen House (1973) and the Jean C. Costantino House (1975). Guides will discuss details of these two houses as well as the cultural, technological, and design context.

B8 Farming Along the Seven-Mile Line BUS TOUR*

2:00pm–5:00pm

Edna Kent, Gloucester Town Historian
 Robert Leach, NCARB, Architect

In 1660, Providence Plantations established the Seven-Mile Line to divide the “inlands” within seven miles of Fox Point from the “outlands” beyond. Today, the Seven-Mile Line marks the boundary between Gloucester and Smithfield in the heart of Apple Valley. This tour will visit several historic farmsteads in the area, including Farnum Farm (now known as Bally Duff Farm), Resolved Waterman Farm (Leach Orchards), and Waterman/Steere Farmstead (Capt. Elisha Steere Farm).

B9 Country Life and Community Life in Foster BUS TOUR*

2:00pm–5:00pm

Jess Pykosz, Farm Manager, Borders Farm Preservation Inc.
 Ed Robinson, President, Foster Preservation Society

This tour connects the story of individual families whose farms were scattered across the countryside to the villages where they gathered to eat and to drink, to worship, to learn, to shop, and to govern. We start with a visit to a 200-acre, 19th-century farmstead donated by the Borders family to a non-profit that works the land, hosts public programs, and preserves the property in perpetuity. Then we visit the village hamlet of Foster Center which developed in the late 18th century and continues to serve as the focus of community and civic life.

*Tours B7–B9 are 3 hours long. If you go on these tours, you will not be able to attend a C session.

C1 Into the Woods: Public Works and Private Playgrounds

Joanna Doherty, Architectural Historian, RIHPHC

Albert Klyberg, Historian and Director Emeritus of the R.I. Historical Society

Todd McLeish, Public Information Officer, URI

Between 1933 and 1941, some 15,000 young men participated in federal Emergency Conservation Work projects (Civilian Conservation Corps) fighting forest fires, building parks, creating trail systems, and other outdoor tasks throughout Rhode Island. Their legacy endures in our state forests, parks, and management areas. In 1954, oil mogul W. Alton Jones purchased 2300 acres in West Greenwich for use as his personal hunting and fishing resort. His property became a research reserve for the University of Rhode Island. Speakers will discuss how some of our state's most significant forested landscapes continue to evolve, by nature or by design.

C2 New Opportunities for State Preservation Tax Credits

Dan Nichols, Project Manager, The Foundry

Ted Sanderson, Executive Director, RIHPHC

Val Talmage, Executive Director, Preserve Rhode Island

Anthony Thomas, Partner, The Foundry

Scott Wolf, Executive Director, Grow Smart Rhode Island

Once again, advocates will rally to reinstate Rhode Island's Historic Tax Credit program. Join state preservation leaders as they discuss their ongoing advocacy campaign, the program's recent output, and prospects for 2015. This year's case study is The Foundry at the former Brown & Sharpe complex in Providence. The developers will discuss the latest phase of this historic rehab project.

C3 Art Deco Rhode Island

Ann Norton, Professor of Art History, Providence College

Eric Sung, Associate Professor of Photography, Providence College

Students, Providence College

Designed to express the optimism of a rapidly modernizing society, Art Deco-style architecture of the 1920s-1940s combined Machine Age motifs, geometric shapes, and the latest materials like aluminum, structural pigmented glass, and glass block. Rhode Island examples include civic buildings like Pawtucket City Hall, banks like the Industrial National Trust Building in Providence, and commercial buildings like the Warwick Ice Cream plant. A team of professors will talk about using Rhode Island as a laboratory for research, and the students will present their analyses of the state's Art Deco architecture.

C4 Rhody Film Showcase: The Sequel

Patti Cassidy, Filmmaker

Mark Levitt, Filmmaker

Bonnie MacDonald, Professor of Communications and Film Studies, Rhode Island College

Jeff Toste, Filmmaker

Watch clips and film shorts and then join filmmakers in conversation about capturing history on film, from Narragansett Indian stone masons to Providence's iconic late-night diner to Rhode Island's storied elephants. The second of two consecutive sessions of the Rhody Film Showcase features "Stories in Stone" by Marc Levitt and Lilach Dekel, "Haven Brothers: Legacy of the American Diner" by Jeff Toste, and "The Ballad of Baby Roger" by Patti Cassidy. See also B4.

C5 Planning Chepachet Village WALKING TOUR

Get an understanding of the issues on Main Street from the perspective of two planners and a local merchant. Discover how historic preservation, infrastructure, and economic development initiatives preserve and improve Chepachet. Topics include recreational opportunities on the Chepachet River, transportation and pedestrian circulation, the role of local historic district zoning, and how special events from the Ancients & Horribles Parade to Candlelight Shopping draw people to the village
